KRLD meteorologist to speak this Thursday

Krista Villarreal is a north Texas native. She grew up in Denton County and was inspired to become a meteorologist at the age of 7 after experiencing first-hand the region's record 1981 flooding from the remnants of Pacific Hurricane Norma. She explains, "my school in Argyle was evacuated and I was carried out - that makes quite an impression on a 2nd grader. I was fascinated by weather, especially tornadoes, and after reading about the Wichita Falls Monster F4 in my Weekly Reader, I was hooked!"

Krista earned a B.S. in Meteorology from Texas A&M, an MBA from the University of North Texas and has the American Meteorological Society "Seal of Approval" for Broadcasters. She is also credentialed in emergency disaster response through the Department of Homeland Security and is in training as a member of the North Central Texas Incident Management Team.

Career:

Krista began her weather career at the National Weather Service Forecast Office in Fort Worth where she honed her forecasting and radar skills, assisted in training storm spotters, launched and tracked weather balloons and became one of the "voices of NOAA Weather Radio". She moved to television in 1999 becoming the weekend morning meteorologist at KXAS, where she broadcasted live through the 2000 Fort Worth tornado, witnessed overhead (from the Ch. 5 parking lot) the 2003 Columbia shuttle disaster and was the first local TV meteorologist to track its descending debris field on radar ("a surreal and profoundly sad day"). In January 2005 Krista joined WPXI (NBC) in Pittsburgh as the weekday morning meteorologist and learned the finer points of forecasting lake-effect snow - and LOTS of it. She offers, "if you need to know anything about the Steelers, Punxsutawney Phil or "Yinzers" (Google it!) I can probably answer it for you."

Krista really enjoyed the beauty of western Pennsylvania, but is excited to be back home in Texas.

Personal:

Krista lives with her husband and young daughter, Abigail, in eastern Tarrant County. Her husband, Fred, is the Design Director at a Dallas TV station and an artist with works exhibited in local galleries. They enjoy playing outside with Abby, traveling, attending concerts and sporting events and entertaining friends and family. Krista has also been very involved with charity work and is a member of the Dallas Red Cross Public Affairs Team.
